Background

Cooperativa Agricola de Productores Organicos de Copan Ltda (COAPROCL) was founded in 2000 by a group of small holder farmers in the Copan region of Honduras. COAPROCL was established with the intent to foster access to new and emerging markets and obtain higher profits for small holder farmers. The main objective of the cooperative is the production and marketing of certified organic coffee.

In addition to achieving higher prices for producers, COAPROCL aim to improve the quality of life for families and members of the community by consolidating and expanding services offered to members and implementing social development programs. The cooperative is also concerned with conservation of the environment and natural resources. All processing techniques are implemented in a sustainable manner.

Today COAPROCL has 44 members situated in four communities near the Copan ruins. The average farm size is 3 ha per producer. Coffee is cultivated at elevations of 900 - 1400 masl in fertile ground under the shade of orange and banana trees. The cooperative have investments in infrastructure, including a dry mill and administrative offices. They also own a coffee brand called Guacamaya through which they sell roasted coffee to the local and national markets.
